

How are you planning for the future?

The advantages make sense:

- Allows you to have control of your own celebration so it truly reflects who you are.
- Organizes family data so your family doesn't worry about locating vital information and instead can spend time supporting each other.
- Serves as an extension of your careful estate planning, reflects your intended legacy and includes your will and memorial contributions.
- Shows your sense of responsibility for family by making decisions, so family members won't have to—saving them from potential disagreements.

Prepare for the unexpected

Most of us plan for things that might happen...

- For damage to our homes - homeowner's insurance
- For medical emergencies - health insurance
- For car accidents - auto insurance
- For retirement - 401k, pension plan

It makes sense to plan for the one thing we know will happen, doesn't it?

If you died today, who would be making the decisions and paying for them tomorrow?

Plan Ahead

Funding your funeral or memorial ahead of time makes good sense:

- Helps remove the unexpected financial burden on your family to pay for your final expenses
- Helps eliminate the need for your family to determine who is responsible for, or capable of, paying for your services
- You may receive first day coverage of entire face amount depending upon your answers to any required health questions
- May not be considered an asset if the ownership is irrevocably transferred as required for Medicaid/SSI spend downs*
- Insurance coverage is portable, allowing you to move as needed during your lifetime and retain your coverage
- The death benefit is generally exempt from income tax liability
